

Students participating in the walkouts at River Ridge High School, led by the Black Student Union there, met some new community allies during the strikes, who stood in solidarity with them for several days (and brought cookies).